

Candlestick patterns

Candlestick Patterns

Candlesticks Name	Bullish or Bearish	What It looks like?
Spinning Top	Neutral	 The Spinning Top pattern consists of two candlesticks. The first is a white candle with a small body and long wicks. The second is a black candle with a small body and long wicks, positioned directly after the first.
Doji	Neutral	 The Doji pattern shows four candlesticks. The first is a white candle with a small body and long wicks. The second is a black candle with a small body and long wicks. The third is a white candle with a small body and long wicks. The fourth is a black candle with a small body and long wicks.
White Marubozu	Bullish	 The White Marubozu pattern is a single white candlestick with a long body and no wicks, indicating a strong bullish move.
Black Marubozu	Bearish	 The Black Marubozu pattern is a single black candlestick with a long body and no wicks, indicating a strong bearish move.

Hammer	Bullish
Hanging Man	Bearish
Inverted Hammer	Bullish
Shooting Star	Bearish

Candlestick Name	Bullish or Bearish	What it looks like?
Bullish Engulfing	Bullish	 A candlestick chart showing a series of four black (bearish) candles followed by two white (bullish) candles. The second white candle is circled in red, as it completely engulfs the body of the first black candle, indicating a potential reversal from bearish to bullish.
Bearish Engulfing	Bearish	 A candlestick chart showing a series of four white (bullish) candles followed by two black (bearish) candles. The second black candle is circled in red, as it completely engulfs the body of the first white candle, indicating a potential reversal from bullish to bearish.
Morning Star	Bullish	 A candlestick chart showing a series of four black (bearish) candles followed by three white (bullish) candles. The first white candle is circled in red, as it is a long candle that opens near the low of the previous day and closes near the high, signaling a potential reversal from bearish to bullish.
Evening Star	Bearish	 A candlestick chart showing a series of four white (bullish) candles followed by three black (bearish) candles. The first black candle is circled in red, as it is a long candle that opens near the high of the previous day and closes near the low, signaling a potential reversal from bullish to bearish.

Candlestick Name	Bullish or Bearish	What it looks like?
Tweezer Bottoms	Bullish
Tweezer Tops	Bearish

For Premium Mentorship

Forex, Binary and Indices

Premium signals

Contact

Mpho Ramochela Trevor

WhatsApp :+27731600643

Email : ramochelatrevor@gmail.com